New Patient Wing To Create A Better Healing Environment

Larger patient rooms, bigger windows, reduced noise levels, better work spaces. These are just a few of the new features that will help improve patient care and well-being at Jennie Melham Memorial Medical Center in Broken Bow, Neb.

These and many more amenities make up the new bed wing addition at the Medical Center, completed this winter.

The addition includes 25 private patient rooms, including two labor and delivery rooms, two monitored rooms, two high-filtration rooms for highly infectious diseases, a state-of-the-art nursing operations station and a nursery. With the well-planned layout of the new patient rooms, many new procedures will be possible to increase staff efficiency and minimize the spread of germs and bacteria between areas.

After all patients are moved to the new addition, remodeling will begin in the former patient room area. The remodeled areas will include a new physical therapy unit, heart lab, sleep study area and business offices. A chapel will also be incorporated in the hospital for the first time.

An open house for the new addition was held January 17; in attendance were Broken Bow Mayor Mac McMeen, State Senator Deb Fischer and Lt. Governor Rick Sheehy.

Spring 2010

Employee of the Year Josh Probasco accepts award from President Buster Beckenhauer.

Employee of the Year

2009 was a challenging year for almost everyone. Even with the challenges, we at Beckenhauer Construction were extremely blessed. Among those who met our challenges best was our Employee of the Year, Josh Probasco.

We are all amazed at how quickly Josh has developed into a superior superintendent. Given his age, his potential is enormous. Josh exemplifies all the traits we strive for in our superintendents—attention to detail, safety for all, on time, under budget, clean jobsite, and most importantly, a delighted client.

Thanks, Josh, and congratulations on being our 2009 Employee of the Year.

Your Safety Is Our Top Priority

Beckenhauer Construction has always been committed to the safety and well-being of our employees and those working around us. The company received a national Certificate of Commendation from AGC of America for our excellent safety record of zero lost-time incidences during the past three years. Congratulations to safety director Jeff Ackerman and our entire team for this outstanding accomplishment!
